The company (owned by Springer Science+Business Media) makes available on the Web, a collection of over 1 million historic book and journal titles, and at the same time provides full-text search of these and 300,000 new titles for academic and research institutions. The service is funded and operated by subscription and by display advertising. Manuscripts Online (formerly Thomson Digital Library) has been running since 1997 and was sold by Thomson to Springer Science+Business Media in 2005, and now operates as an independent company. Until September 2008 the service was free of charge but could only be used from the Web. From then onwards, a more flexible "Landscape" version, which can also be used by people with dial-up connection, was made available. Other planned features are a functionality to synchronise content with Microsoft Outlook and a mobile version for handheld devices. As of November 2006, Manuscripts Online also offers the full-text access to over 30,000 scientific and medical journals, as well as the full-text access to monographs from Elsevier. Manuscripts Online was installed in around 10,000 libraries, mostly in Europe, including 70 libraries in the UK (2 in Wales, 2 in Scotland and 11 in England). Contents As of November 2006, Manuscripts Online offers on the Web books and journals issued before the 1960s, as well as the full-text access to tens of thousands of monographs.
